Way in, page 13, ex. 3

Announcer: Listen to a guided tour of One World Trade Center.

Narrator: September 11, 2001 was a sunny morning in New York City. In the World Trade Center people were going to work when the first terrorist plane crashed into the building. Nearly 3,000 people died. Over two billion people watched the events on TV.

Thirteen years later the new One World Trade Center opened. It's the tallest building in the country. It's 1,776 feet high. The view of the New York skyline is spectacular. Millions of visitors come to see it every year. Elevators travel to the top in just 60 seconds. Inside these special elevators a short movie shows the visitors the history of New York City from 1500 to today. The elevators are not only fast, they are green too. They produce the electricity for all the lights in the tower.

It was important for New York and the people of the United States to build One World Trade Center on the grounds of the old World Trade Center. When we look at this building, we remember the people of 2001. We remember the people who died on that day and we also remember the thousands of people who worked together.
