Rewilding nature

Have you ever heard of rewilding? This concept has gained some attention lately and is an approach to restoring sustainable biodiversity and ecosystem health.

Rewilding aims to protect important wilderness to prevent species from going extinct.

You might be wondering about the necessity of such attempts - isn't there enough green stuff around us? And why do people even go out and support these kind of projects?

It is all linked together.

We, the people are part of it, the nature. And we, the people, need it, the nature, to survive. Nature produces oxygen for us to breathe. Nature consumes the carbon dioxide that we, the people produce.

This is the link for life on our planet.

① Explain the term „ecosystem“ using your own words.

② Do we really need nature? State your opinion.
